
marriage for gay couples was launched on Saturday with a rally attended by hundreds of people. Cllr Breckenridge said that allowing gay and lesbian couples to marry would allow children to grow up in a more loving and accepting environment. He said: "The children of gay and lesbian couples are the children of our families and they need to be allowed to be part of the family as everyone else is." The Nuneaton and Warwickshire councillor said the policy should include other LGBT people and should be enforced via public law in the same way as heterosexual marriages. He added: "We need to do this because we want people to grow up in a happy world, we want to live in a world where people will not suffer from bullying. "It is a non-violent way to end discrimination in the same way as the law ends discrimination against women and women's right to maternity." He said that even if the ban was enacted it would not apply to current gay marriages in the UK. Cllr Breckenridge said he was campaigning against the ban because it "pink-washed" the real issue of gay people not being accepted in British society. He said: "No-one can live in a society where they cannot get married and be respected as equal. "If we want to live in a society where people are allowed to go off and get married in some sense of the word and be accepted by their society in their marriages then this should include gay and lesbian couples." The campaign comes after the Coalition Government announced last year that civil same-sex marriage will be introduced following a vote in the House of Commons. Two landmark rulings against the Government's plans - including the Supreme Court ruling that found the Marriage (Same Sex Couples) Act 2013 was unconstitutional - are expected to be heard in the Supreme Court later this year. The Government has said that during the 15 months it 3e33713323
