A 50-year-old man was admitted with a mass on the scalp with inflammation of the overlying skin. A routine mammogram of the breast showed a tumor in the upper outer quadrant of the left breast. A skin biopsy was performed and the pathological diagnosis was angiosarcoma. The tumor had invaded into the underlying muscle layer. The patient underwent one course of neoadjuvant chemotherapy (Doxorubicin 25 mg/m<sup>2</sup> on day 1, Cisplatin 40 mg/m<sup>2</sup> on day 1, S-1 100 mg/day for the first three days of a week for 2 consecutive weeks, followed by 2 weeks of rest) and received 50 Gy of radiation therapy. Three months after the completion of radiation therapy, mastectomy, partial resection of the left lower jaw with lymph node dissection was performed. The pathological diagnosis was the same as that of the skin. The patient is still alive 4 years after treatment without tumor recurrence in the scalp or the neck. The inhibitory effect of ascorbic acid on carnitine oxidation in rat hepatocyte homogenates. This investigation was carried out to evaluate whether ascorbic acid inhibits carnitine oxidation in rat hepatocytes. Addition of ascorbic acid (0.5 mM) to incubation medium decreased the oxidation rate of free carnitine by 36% at 37 degrees C. Ascorbic acid did not inhibit the oxidation of either free or esterified carnitine in the mouse. Addition of ascorbic acid to incubation medium decreased the activity of carnitine palmitoyltransferase I by 51% at 37 degrees C, but the activity of carnitine palmitoyltransferase II was inhibited by 19%. The inhibition of carnitine palmitoyltransferase I by ascorbic acid was observed in the incubation medium of rat hepatocytes. This ascorbic acid-induced inhibition was dose-dependent. These results suggest that carnitine oxidation is decreased by ascorbic acid in rat hepat 3e33713323
