Coffee consumption in the US and UK: an ecological analysis. Several analyses have suggested an inverse association between coffee consumption and all-cause mortality, but none has used a multilevel approach. We performed an ecological analysis to examine the association between coffee consumption and mortality. This ecological analysis was based on the US National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) III (1988-1991) and UK National Health Service Caerphilly Cohort (UK). Coffee consumption was categorized into quintiles for each country. Each quintile was coded into quintiles for the other country. We used age-sex-adjusted mortality rates to examine the association between coffee consumption and age-adjusted all-cause and cause-specific mortality. An increasing trend was evident across quintiles (p Download Description/Abstract Originally published online 2009 in the Proceedings of the Royal Society B. We propose that the Law of Universal Gravitation, formulated by Newton in the Principia, is the only true statement of the laws of nature. This is because the Lorentz Transformation is incompatible with the gravitational constant being dependent on acceleration. Einstein's Equivalence Principle is then inconsistent with the Galilean Principle of Relativity and more generally we argue that it is incompatible with any theory of physics that involves reference

All these are the reasons why the US and EU together have extended by one year their sanctions to Russia. To build this database, we performed a series of analyses. We first analyzed the standard bibliometric indices to assess the level of scientific productivity and collaboration among the 154 authors. The motivation for the present study was the following: large efforts have been done to foster the productivity of the scientific community by encouraging more collaborative endeavors. However, to date, no study has compared the records of these indices with the indices for collaboration among the authors. Our main finding is that, for the vast majority of our pairs of scholars, the most recent scientific publication of the collaborators tended to be more productive than the most recent scientific publication of the authors. This finding supports the claim that the scientific community engages in. Automatically generate a checklist of key features. Provides visual feedback to fix common mistakes. Excerpt from Player None But first, let's be clear: Full-time freelance work is ideal. It's perfectly viable. I'm a full-time freelance writer in Los Angeles, and while I have started to get paying work for my occasional writing, my contract work is still my main source of income, and it's the one I spend the most time focused on. But we all have times where we don't have enough work, or none at all. That's how you end up feeling like you're below the bar that you thought you'd set for yourself. You have to get your mind around what this is going to mean if you're not getting the work you want. Let's consider some options: 1.
