As in the past, Photoshop can be used to make changes to the appearance of artwork without touching the original artwork as seen in the examples below. The Clone Stamp tool can be used to create a "rubber-stamp" to duplicate an area of an image. A simple copy/paste will render the new copy locked to the original's layer. Layer masking can be used to blur or change the regions that are hidden behind the mask. Layer masks can be used to hide layers of your choice, and are an invaluable tool for making branding changes to a variety of items. The Pen tool is available to open more paths with more precision. Entire meshes can now be added to layers. As in the past, the Blur tool is available to apply different types of blur to your images and artwork. New Brush and Pen tools make it easier to create a variety of brushes that can be used in virtually any type of Painting. Keep in mind that these types of features are available to all Adobe Creative Cloud models, including Photoshop, Illustrator and Lightroom. The introduction of native GPU technology affects how Photoshop renders layers. Previously, these were rendered in a raster-like fashion across the light cone, using older APIs as an intermediary. The automatic exposure control and the histogram now update as you adjust exposure of the active layer in Photoshop. Lens Correction has also been added to the tools that work with the Lens Correction tab. Lens Correction can be useful when you want to get rid of the effects of various lenses such as glasses.
