And Starz are going to make it. Fruitvale Station is part of a nine-part series of sci-fi series due to be made by AMC Networks, available free for a limited time. The series will follow criminal prodigy Marcus Garvey, otherwise known as Bay-wurm, who is obsessed with achieving fame and fortune. This obsession lands him in the orbit of an undercover gangster who controls the nightlife of New York. But when Bay gets out of jail and his notoriety lands him in the right place at the wrong time, his world begins to change, and so, too, does the inner-city community he has chosen to be his life's mission. The project comes from Neal Moritz, his life after Fast and Furious six, as well as two-time Academy Award winner Morgan Freeman, who is probably best known for his roll in The Shawshank Redemption as Andy Dufresne. Freeman's name is on the picture as a producer. Starz told me, "We are so excited to be embarking on a new chapter with great partners like AMC Networks, and working with an incredibly talented and dynamic cast led by Oscar winning actor Morgan Freeman." Freeman's working with William Friedkin, the writer/director of Friedkin's two-time Oscar winning Killer's Kiss and The French Connection. He will also have a producer's credit. Freeman has three projects at Starz right now. He is the lead in the costume drama Black Sails, the second series in The Sult, and he's also the lead in the comedy The Dictator. The latter should debut this coming Friday. Last year, Freeman made his directorial debut with the Spike Lee-produced The Get Down. That

Asian immigrants in the United States are at high risk of acquiring sexually transmitted infections (STIs). A retrospective analysis was conducted to assess rates of STI screening and treatment among Asian immigrant women in an academic medical center. Relevant characteristics, diagnoses, and treatment practices were examined. Inclusion criteria were women of Asian descent residing in the United States and with an International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision diagnosis of chlamydia, gonorrhea, or trichomonas. Of the 652 women assessed for inclusion, 167 (26%) met the inclusion criteria. Of these, 41 (25%) were screened for STIs within the past year, and 52 (31%) were treated within the past year. Significant predictors of not being screened included age <20 years (odds ratio [OR] = 0.08, P = 0.004) and not having received a gynecological examination within the past year (OR = 0.13, P = 0.05). Among the 141 women who were screened and treated for an STI within the past year, 5.6% reported an STI symptom in the past year, and no organisms were detected during posttreatment specimen collection. These findings indicate a high rate of STI screening and treatment among Asian immigrant women; however, the reported rate of STI symptoms suggests that many patients fail to seek medical attention for symptoms of STI.
