It's a daily battle that many of us have battled for years, just one of the reasons why I'm totally addicted to ibuprofen. The pain killers do their thing, but they also have lots of side effects. One of the side effects from taking too much ibuprofen is it could change the chemistry of your brain, as Science Daily reports. "If you have a high level of inflammation, like when you're really sick, you have a lot of prostaglandins, which are a family of hormones that can cause pain. And when you take pain killers, they shut off those prostaglandins," says Calabrese, who, along with co-author Dr. Steve Lucki, is an associate professor of biomedical and behavioral sciences at the
